WORK IN PROGRESS

When the Market Goes Down: Aggregate Uncertainty and Micro-Dynamics..

Income Tax Progressivity as a Stabilizer of Labor Income Risk, with Julien Pascal.

We show that decreasing income tax progressivity causes an increase in the overall volatility of income in the economy. Our estimated search-and-matching model of the labour market is able to reproduce several stylized facts on the cyclical behaviour of income risk.

Intra-Firm Hierarchies and Gender Gaps, with Aseem Patel and Joanne Tan.

Does increased female leadership decrease gender wage gaps within firms? Exploiting a recent French reform on board membership composition we do not find any statistically significant effect other than at the very top of the organisation.

Benchmarking Markups, with Flavien Moreau and Ludovic Panon.

We investigate the impact on markup estimates of frictions in firms input decisions. In particular, we find that choosing labor instead of materials as the flexible input in standard markup estimation routines can lead to very different conclusions.

WORKING PAPERS

How Social Networks Shape Our Beliefs: A Natural Experiment among Future French Politicians, with Yann Algan, Quoc-Anh Do and Yves Zenou.

This paper shows how friendship shapes beliefs and political opinion. We make use of a unique natural experiment that randomly assigns new freshmen into groups in a college that produces most of France's top politicians. We find strong, robust effects of friendship on differences in beliefs.
